

Germany: Unemployment in Berlin (1931)

1. The workers are most affected, showing the struggle of unemployment during the Great Depression.
2. Worn clothing and sad expressions highlight economic hardship.
3. A strong leader might promise jobs, which would appeal to those desperate for work.

German Bank Crisis (1931)

1. The most affected are the people who lost their savings, shown by the crowds at the banks.
2. The long lines and worried faces show the panic and fear caused by the bank crisis.
3. A strong leader might promise to fix the economy and protect people's money, which would help citizens feel safer.

Soup Kitchens in Berlin

1. The families are most affected, struggling to get enough food.
2. The long lines, tired faces, and simple clothing show how serious hunger was during this time.
3. A strong leader might promise to fix food shortages and provide better living conditions, which would help those in need.

The Jarrow March, Britain (1936)

1. The workers are most affected, shown by them marching in the Jarrow March.
2. The signs, big crowds, and serious faces show they want the government to help them.
3. A strong leader might promise to make jobs and help people, which would make those struggling feel hopeful.

French Workers' Strikes (1936)

1. The workers are most affected, shown by their participation in the strikes.
2. The raised fists, banners, and determined expressions show their frustration and demand for change.
3. A strong leader might promise better working conditions and fair wages, which would appeal to workers seeking justice.

Austrian Civil Conflict (1934)

1. The workers and civilians are most affected, shown by the violence and protests.
2. The injured people, angry crowds, and armed soldiers highlight the intense political conflict.
3. A strong leader might promise to restore peace and end violence, which would appeal to citizens wanting safety and stability.

Spanish Bread Lines (Early 1930s)

1. The people in the bread lines are most affected, showing how many struggled with poverty.
2. The long lines and the signs for free food highlight the widespread hunger and need for help.
3. A strong leader might promise to end poverty and provide jobs, which would appeal to those suffering from hunger and unemployment.

Nazi Rally in Germany (Early 1930s)

1. The people at the rally are most affected, shown by their large support for the Nazi party.
2. The massive crowd and the Nazi symbols reflect the growing support for extremist political movements during the economic crisis.
3. A strong leader might promise to restore national pride and provide jobs, which would appeal to those desperate for stability and change.

Italian Fascist Youth Rally

1. Children appear most affected, showing youth were influenced during economic hardship.

2. Uniforms and serious faces suggest people wanted order during hard times.

3. A strong leader promised jobs, stability, and national pride.

Italian Fascist Youth Rally

1. Rural families appear most affected, showing farmers suffered during agricultural collapse.

2. Simple clothing and wooden homes show poverty and economic hardship.

3. A strong leader would promise food, jobs, and support for struggling farmers